

The wisconsin "No Call List" gives strong protection to more than 80 percent of its state residents. I urge the federal government to leave the wisconsin "No Call List" alone. That is make no changes to the current policy and the way it is written. Telemarketing has been one of the number 1 consumer complaints in wisconsin.

I totally disagree allowing the federal law that allows companies to telemarket former customers for up to 18 months after cancellation of services in wisconsin. I do not want any calls from any business; long distance telephone, credit card companies, etc., the ability to reclaim me as their customer in wisconsin. Also, I do not want a company or any of its affiliates the ability to call me to telemarket any of their products.

I urge you to leave the current wisconsin law, which allows only one call to former customers, as is with no changes.
